

Voices.com Relies on SURVE to Maintain a 95% Customer Satisfaction Rating

With a global network of more than 125,000 voice actors in over 100 languages and more than 125,000 online clients, Voices.com takes customer loyalty very seriously. They're literally in the business of forging relationships between creative talent and the companies that need them. As such, happy customers translate directly into referrals and new business.

In 2010, Voices.com collected customer feedback using survey software that did not integrate with their CRM solution – Salesforce®. The solution served a basic purpose but created inefficiencies around centralizing and acting on customer feedback because the data was inaccessible beyond the solution itself and manual exports. When they learned that the software developer was soon to discontinue the technology, urgency arose to replace the outmoded application with something more sophisticated that of course integrated with Salesforce.

Voices.com quickly turned to the AppExchange™ to research replacement solutions that would easily integrate with Salesforce and provide more sophisticated surveying capabilities. High ratings and customer reviews put SURVE at the top of the list. David Ciccarelli, CEO, Voices.com, explained: “When we look at applications to improve our business, we start with the Salesforce platform and look for best-of-breed products that play well with it. SURVE was the top-rated app on the AppExchange. The customer reviews along with the depth of the integration made SURVE the natural choice for Voices.com.”

Experiencing the Ease of Surveys-to-CRM

During a brief trial and implementation period, the company rebuilt its existing surveys in the SURVE environment. They reached out for support and one-on-one training to configure their first survey and map SURVE fields into a Salesforce custom object called “Report Cards,” which was created specifically to house customer feedback.

By all accounts, the operations staff at Voices.com found SURVE amazing to work with. A one-on-one tour of the application helped with mapping their first survey. Since then, the company has relied heavily on its SURVE customer satisfaction surveys, which are automatically sent as follow-ups to support

Results that Impact Performance & Profits

SURVE customer satisfaction surveys have allowed Voices.com to engage customers immediately after interactions with their service team. Managers can quickly identify areas in need of improvement, where they can adjust and enhance overall customer experience. The information obtained also presents ongoing training opportunities for individual team members and groups.

Knowing Promoters and Detractors via the NPS survey provides invaluable insight into what the organization does well and where it requires strengthening. This feedback is so important to the company that a dedicated support cases. The executive team regularly analyzes these results. These surveys are equally critical to the Voices.com support team, whose individual employee performance metrics are affected by the scores.

Voices.com also established a NetPromoter™ survey (NPS), which enables them to gauge how they’re perceived by customers and identify the likelihood of active customers becoming “promoters” or “detractors.”

Additionally, Voices.com leverages SURVE to run random user experience surveys for product development purposes and collects voluntary input from customers via a Send Feedback Tab embedded within their product.

making customer feedback accessible companywide in the familiar CRM environment. This empowers support agents to provide effective, personalized service and the product team to continually evolve their offering based on real-world input. Managers can see results in Salesforce on both the contact and account levels, and build dashboards for a broad view of the program’s results.

Notably, Voices.com set an initial target to reach an 80% customer satisfaction score. Far beyond their original expectations, they now maintain an average customer satisfaction score of 95% on a quarterly basis. Ciccarelli summarized the value of SURVE to his organization: “Every morning we gather as a team and review our customer satisfaction scores. Because we have real-time data at our fingertips...we are agile enough to make changes that have a real impact on business performance and profits.”
